Presents

International Women's Day

Awards Program

March 6, 2009

In 1910, 100 women from 17 countries gathered in Copenhagen and established an International Women's Day celebration to be held annually to honor the women's rights movement and to support universal suffrage for women. In 1975, the United Nations began sponsoring International Women's Day to direct attention to the right of women to be fully engaged in the political and economic processes that shape their lives. Today, the United Nation's commemoration of March 8th highlights women's issues globally and focuses on women's achievements.

In 2004, the World Trade Center Miami established International Women's Day to honor women whose achievements have advanced the promotion of free trade and international business in the Americas.
